

Celebrating the differences that give us strength.

Workers of colour is a labour term used by the BCGEU and the Canadian Labour Congress. These workers may be new to Canada or come from families who've lived here for generations. They contribute to our society at all levels, but often face barriers related to discrimination and misconceptions.

The BC Government and Service Employees' Union is committed to advancing equity and human rights.

The BCGEU Equity and Human Rights Committee comprises members of equity groups (Aboriginal Workers; Workers of Colour; Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual, Transgendered Workers; Workers with Disabilities).

If you are a BCGEU member of an equity group and want to join one of our equity networks, complete the equity questionnaire on the Human Rights page at www.bcgeu.ca or through your local BCGEU area office.

Workers of colour is a labour term used by the BCGEU and the Canadian Labour Congress. These workers may be new to Canada or come from families who've lived here for generations. They contribute to our society at all levels, but often face barriers related to discrimination and misconceptions.

The BC Government and Service Employees' Union is committed to advancing equity and human rights.

The BCGEU Equity and Human Rights Committee comprises members of equity groups (Aboriginal Workers; Workers of Colour; Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual, Transgendered Workers; Workers with Disabilities).

If you are a BCGEU member of an equity group and want to join one of our equity networks, complete the equity questionnaire on the Human Rights page at www.bcgeu.ca or through your local BCGEU area office.

cep 467 / cope 378

Celebrating the differences that give us strength.

